Russian Federation, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyz Republic, Armenia — Requirements for energy efficiency of energy-related devices

New energy efficiency requirements adopted by four members of the Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU) for various devices such as televisions and vacuum cleaners were raised as a concern by Korea. It said the timing of entry into force was premature given the pace of technological development, and Korea requested that a single common language be used for labels within the EAEU.

Speaking on behalf of the four members, the Russian Federation said the technical regulation had been drafted in close cooperation with the business community, including multinationals from Korea. In any event, Korea's requests would be conveyed to the Eurasian Economic Commission for proper consideration.
